Steve Troxler
Commissioner

As the weather turns cooler and a few rain clouds finally open up, I am reminded that we have much to be thankful for as the holiday season approaches, despite a challenging and persistent drought.

Personally, I am grateful we had a very successful State Fair and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves, thanks in part to great weather.

Just as importantly, I am happy we also had a safe Fair with no serious accidents.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services works with the Department of Labor to ensure all rides met the standards of Labor Commissioner Cherie Berry and her inspectors.

And in keeping with this year's theme, a great team of law enforcement officers made the Fair a place where families could enjoy some Seriously Twisted Fun.

I am also grateful to all the North Carolinians who came out and made this the largest N.C. State Fair ever.

From the moment we got things officially started with the opening ceremony in Heritage Circle, I had a good feeling this Fair would be one for the record books.

From giant turkey legs to giant pumpkins, we always do things in a big way at the Fair, and this year was no exception. We had a record-setting number of 858,611 people walk through our gates over the 10-day period, turning the fairgrounds into a small city that was full of life.

I hope everyone who came ate some deep-fried food, watched a traditional folk dance, saw the new state-record large pumpkin and enjoyed at least one of our great

2007 State Fair shatters 10-day attendance record

More than 858,500 take part in the Seriously Twisted Fun

The North Carolina State Fair ended its 10-day run with a new all-time record attendance of 858,611, shattering the previous record of 846,724 that had stood since 2000.

Sunday's attendance of 98,433 ended on a record note as well. The previous high for Sunday attendance was 90,241, set in 2005.

"I had a good feeling going into this year's Fair that it would be record setting, and I am thrilled we have reached this milestone. But just as importantly, I am grateful we had a safe Fair and everyone seemed to enjoy themselves," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "I want to thank North Carolinians for coming out and making this the biggest State Fair ever."

The 2007 State Fair also marked several other milestones, including five sold-out shows in Dorton Arena: MercyMe, Josh Turner, Paula Deen, Kellie Pickler and Daughtry.

The Fair also boasted its largest midway with 113 rides, and posted its largest attendance for a Tuesday with 69,829, which had stood since 1984.

Make plans now to join the fun next year. The 2008 State Fair will be held Oct. 17-26.

Farmers advised to test alternative cattle feed for nitrates

With the hay shortage predicted to exceed 250,000 tons this year, many beef cattle producers have turned to alternative feed sources they might not be familiar with. Producers have reported being satisfied with the feed they've been able to obtain, but rumors of nitrate poisoning have caused alarm in some counties.

So far, these rumors have not been substantiated, but Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler wants to remind producers that having feed tested for quality is especially important this year because of the drought.

"For the past few months, the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and N.C. Cooperative Extension have coordinated educational sessions about the use of dried corn stalks and leaves as feed," Troxler said. "Large quantities have been harvested for use during the coming winter, and cattlemen have been surprised at how well the cows consume this material, commonly known as stover."

"To my knowledge, we have not had any problems with herds that have been on a corn stalk diet," said Jeff Carpenter, area livestock agent for Catawba, Gaston and Lincoln counties. "One farmer did lose a mature cow, but the NCDA&CS diagnostic lab determined that it did not die of nitrate poisoning."

One of Carpenter's local farmers contracted for 150 rolls of corn stalks, but was skeptical about using them. Within a month, he called wanting to know where he could get some more, Carpenter said. The cows had almost finished all the stover the farmer already bought.

In Carpenter's area, three stover samples out of the 30 sent to the NCDA&CS Feed and Forage Testing Laboratory have had nitrate levels above 0.5 percent. Nitrate values at this level are considered a moderate risk to pregnant animals. Carpenter has been working closely with the affected livestock producers to make sure that this stover is used safely.

Statewide, 11 percent of the stover samples submitted to the NCDA&CS feed and forage lab have contained at least 0.5 percent nitrates. However, the only reported nitrate-related cattle deaths this

More than 10,000 N.C. premises registered through NCFarmID

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services has reached a milestone in its NCFarmID program, with more than 10,000 premises now registered in the state.

NCFarmID is part of an effort to protect North Carolina’s food supply and animal industry by identifying farms with livestock.

North Carolina leads other states in the Southeast in farm registrations and is one of the top states in regards to education, outreach and registration of the commercial livestock industry. Nearly 28 percent of premises have voluntarily registered for the program.

“This program promotes human health, animal health and food safety. It’s the right thing to do and is in everyone’s best interests,” said Agriculture

Commissioner Steve Troxler.

NCFarmID is North Carolina’s part of the National Animal Identification System, a three-part program with the goal of tracing a disease outbreak back to a farm within 48 hours.

Through premises registration, a unique national identification number is assigned to locations in North Carolina where animals are born and raised. Tying a premises identification number to an individual animal identification number allows first responders to more effectively trace animal disease back to its source. This system is used in Canada and throughout Europe.

Farmers are encouraged to voluntarily participate in the program. For more information about the program, visit www.NCFarmID.com.

season have been from Bermuda grass hay, not corn stover.

Because few samples have contained high nitrate levels, producers should consider corn stover a viable – and economical – livestock feed option during the drought. But the results also show the importance of testing for nitrates. Whenever any feed or forage tests positive for nitrates above 0.25 percent, consult a Cooperative Extension livestock agent regarding the safety of its use.

For more information about feeding livestock during the drought, visit the NCDA&CS Ag Drought Resource Page at www.ncagr.com/drought/orCooperative Extension’s Drought Education Page at www.ces.ncsu.edu/drought. To submit forage samples for analysis, go to www.ncfeedandforage.com or call (919) 733-7366.

Dorton Arena shows. But most importantly, I hope everyone who visited the Fair took with them the importance of agriculture to our state and the people who live in it.

The State Fair, along with the Mountain State Fair, is an important showcase for the crops and livestock vital to North Carolina’s economy. It is up to us to uphold the agricultural traditions of North Carolina and educate future generations.

We all have a connection to agriculture whether we farm or not, because agriculture puts food on everyone’s table.

Events such as the Junior Livestock Sale of Champions provide up-and-coming producers with money for their education and give them an opportunity to showcase the hard work that went into raising their animals.

There’s nothing more rewarding for me than youngsters leading their prize animal around the ring, and I know their parents enjoyed it, too.

This auction raised an incredible record of $105,000 this year. It’s exciting to see businesses such as Harris Teeter, Martin Meats, Martin Pork and Neese’s Country Sausage generously support the future farmers of our state. Speaking of N.C. products, I hope you and your family will keep our “Got to Be NC” motto in mind as the holidays approach.

As you begin to decorate your house and plan special holiday menus, make a trip to your local farmers market for delicious home-grown foods and make a stop at a N.C. “Choose and Cut” Christmas tree farm. You can even pick up some great N.C. crafts and gifts to put under that tree.

There’s nothing better than spending time with loved ones around a table full of locally grown food and products. From my family to yours, I wish you a safe and blessed holiday season.

State Fair livestock auction generates $105,000 for youth winners

Junior livestock champion and reserve winners earned $105,000 for their prize animals at the N.C. State Fair Junior Livestock Auction, Oct. 13. For the first time, a special born-and-bred in North Carolina grand champion lamb was sold at auction.

“The Junior Livestock Sale of Champions provides these up-and-coming producers with money for their education and gives them an opportunity to showcase the hard work that went into raising these animals,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “I appreciate the generous support of N.C. agriculture by businesses such as Harris Teeter, Martin Meats, Martin Pork and Neese’s Country Sausage.”

Harris Teeter bid $25,000 for the 1,295-pound grand champion junior market steer shown by Derek Jones, 17, of Barnardsville (Madison County). The 1,286-pound reserve grand champion junior market steer was shown by Dillon Ridling, 17, of Salisbury (Rowan County). Martin Meats placed the winning bid of $17,500. Frank Scott, 13, of Lucama (Wilson County), sold the special born-and-bred in North Carolina steer for $22,000 to Harwood Brothers, Martin Meats and Stanly County Livestock.

Samantha Byrum, 12, of Elizabeth City (Pasquotank County), sold her grand champion lamb to Harris Teeter for $8,500. Byrum’s grand champion lamb also won the new born-and-bred in North Carolina grand champion lamb category. Harris Teeter also purchased the reserve champion lamb for $5,000, shown by Sydney Cox, 13, of Trenton (Jones County).

Cox also sold her 280-pound grand champion barrow for $10,000 to Harris Teeter. The 262-pound reserve champion barrow was purchased jointly by Neese’s Country Sausage and Martin Pork for $8,500 and was shown by A.J. Carpenter, 7, of Franklin (Macon County). The grand champion turkey was shown by Christopher Loehr, 14, of Raleigh, and was sold to Harris Teeter for $5,000. Evan Gunter, 11, of Asheboro (Randolph County), exhibited the reserve champion turkey. Iron Horse Auction purchased it for $3,500.

REMINDER to Farmers: Applications for Golden Hay Relief due by Dec. 31

Dec. 31 is the application deadline for the Golden Hay Relief Program, which helps livestock producers pay for transportation of hay and alternative feeds purchased in North Carolina and trucked to their farms.

The cost-share program is funded by a $500,000 grant from the Golden LEAF Foundation to assist producers of cattle, sheep, goats and horses.

The reimbursement amount will be determined by dividing the $500,000 by the amount of money requested by farmers in approved applications. Farmers will be reimbursed for a percentage of their transportation costs, not to exceed 50 percent.

Farmers can download an application and eligibility criteria from the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services’ Hay Alert Web site, www.ncagr.com/HayAlert. Or they can call toll free 1-866-506-6222 weekdays from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

The Hay Alert site and hotline also help farmers find hay and transportation.

State Fair Livestock Hall of Fame, NCSU establish scholarship fund

Animal science students at N.C. State University will soon have a new scholarship available to them, thanks to the generosity of members of the N.C. State Fair Livestock Hall of Fame.

Ag Commissioner Steve Troxler and NCSU College of Agriculture and Life Sciences Dean Johnny Wynne recently signed an agreement establishing the N.C. State Fair Livestock Hall of Fame Animal Science Scholarship Endowment.

Beginning in 2008, scholarships of $1,000 will be awarded to one or more undergraduate students in the N.C. State Department of Animal Science. The scholarships will be awarded based on academic merit, quality of character, leadership ability and understanding of animal agriculture. Priority will be given to students with a background, interest or career plans in large animal and production animal agriculture.

Awards will be for one year and may be renewed if the recipient maintains a 2.8 grade point average in animal science courses.

The scholarship endowment has a goal of $50,000, and at press time had received pledges totaling $25,000, said James Smith, a Livestock Hall of Fame member and chairman of the endowment committee.

Livestock Hall of Fame members who contribute at least $1,000 to the endowment will be recognized as charter members on a plaque to be placed in the Jim Graham Building at the State Fairgrounds.

Memorials in honor of deceased Hall of Fame inductees will be accepted from family members and friends.

For information about contributing to the scholarship endowment, contact Keith Oakley, president of the N.C. Agricultural Foundation, at (919) 515-9262.
